Lines Held by Allies Are The Objective of Five Separate German Drives

BIGGEST STRUGGLE YET

Allied Reinforcements Are Reported Rushing From The Coast to Key Positions

By Sten Hedman
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

STOCKHOLM, Apr. 30.—Allied, Norwegian and German forces fought a serious battle today for possession of a strategic railway line in the heart of Norway. Crux of the fighting was at Dombaas and Stoeren.

Lines held by the Allies, were the objective of five separate German drives that are developing into the greatest struggle of the Norwegian campaign to date.

While one Nazi column moved down from the north, four more advanced from the south in an effort to seize the Dombaas-Stoeren Railroad and to cripple allied communications in central Norway.

Allied reinforcements were reported rushing from the coast to help defend the key positions against the German assault, part in the Gudbrands Valley.

According to neutral reports to Stockholm the German columns clashed with the British at the Railway and the highway junction of Hjerkin and Berkak between Dombaas and the German-held port of Trondheim, chief objective of the allied offensive.

(A bulletin from the British broadcasting company said, "Allied troops in Norway have now held up German attacks to advance to the relief of Trondheim. According to latest reports the allied military position north of Steinkjer has been vastly improved.")

Reports from Stockholm said that southeast of Dombaas, the Germans carried out a successful counter-attack against the British and swept past Kvam thirty-five miles below Dombaas. Heavy fighting was reported in progress but it was not confirmed that the Germans occupied Kvam after pushing the allies back in a battle that lasted nearly three days.

Norwegian quarters contradicting another advance, maintained that the German advance toward the Trondheim railway route had been halted in the mountains.

One Nazi column was held up near Kvikne and another failed to progress toward Hjerkin these sources insisted.

LONDON, Apr. 30.—Five persons were killed and many injured when German planes bombed two hospital ships off Aalesund, Norway, according to a war dispatch. According to a German radio broadcast intercepted in Oslo, the hospital ships were the Albatross and Albatross.

Are You Doing Your Share?

(By "The Stroller")
We took a sight-seeing trip this week.

We travelled less than nine miles.

But we saw plenty!

Are you interested? Well, every Bristolian should be in what we viewed—for it's the same thing you and you are viewing every day of your lives—but few appear to do anything about it.

What we were looking for—and had no trouble finding—was just plain trash and litter—dumping grounds big and small which blot the surface of this borough of which we otherwise are so proud.

Two Burned to Death

Philadelphia, Apr. 30.—Two young men were burned to death and five other persons were injured when fire of an undetermined origin swept through a two story row-house in West Philadelphia today.

The dead are Harry Rothstein, 26, and Oscar Bolek, 28. Firemen said they apparently had been overcome by smoke before they could reach a safe part of the blazing second floor.

The injured are Isidore Rothstein, 52, father of Harry; his daughter Cecilia, 18, and three firemen. Mrs. Isidore Rothstein, 53, and her daughter Reba, Bolek's wife escaped injury.

Think Roosevelt Will Drop Out of 1940 Race

Washington, Apr. 30.—There was increasing evidence today that President Roosevelt ultimately will declare himself out of the 1940 race.

The signs were seen as a White House move was made to retain harmony in Texas between third term advocates and the forces of Vice President Garner.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement of position one way or the other is not expected until after the Republicans have nominated their candidate at Philadelphia in late June.

Intimates of the President are convinced that President Roosevelt wants to quit at the end of his second term. They believe that after eight grueling years in the White House he wants to get out and loaf and enjoy himself.

One member of the White House inner circle followed this line of reasoning—"that events in Europe might be piling up so fast as to make him do something he doesn't want to do."

"CRAZY VOTERS" CAUSE MUCH EXTRA WORK

Over 50 Names Written In On Ballots for President of United States

OFFICIAL COUNT ENDED

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 30.—Election boards throughout Bucks County were caused all kinds of trouble and extra work by the "crazy voters" who wrote in various names on the ballots of both of the parties at the Primary election held last Tuesday. More than 50 names were written in for President of the United States. Gracie Allen received seven votes for President of the United States. Voters do not realize what work they cause the boards nor the expense to which the taxpayer is put by their actions.

Congressman Charles L. Gerlach, of the Bucks-Lehigh district in Congress, received the highest number of votes of any candidate at the recent primary election in Bucks county, according to the figures taken from the official count that was completed Saturday afternoon. The popular Republican member of the House of Representatives in Washington, polled 8545 votes in Bucks county alone.

On the Democratic ticket, President Franklin D. Roosevelt led all other candidates in Bucks county, receiving 3467 Democratic votes, compared to the second highest man on the ballot, Joseph E. Guffy, of Allegheny county, for United States Senator, who polled 2581. President Roosevelt polled 193 Republican votes.

For President on the Republican ticket, the name of Thomas Dewey led all others with 1994 votes. Governor James polled 286, President Roosevelt, 193; Taft, 176 and Vandenberg, 130.

It took 22 hours to complete the official count and this was made unusually long as a result of the so-called "crazy voting" which necessitated clerks writing in hundreds of names.

The complete official count of the 1940 primary election vote in Bucks county is as follows:

REPUBLICAN
President: Thomas Dewey, 1694;
Arthur James, 286; Roosevelt, 193;
Taft, 176; Vandenberg, 130.
United States Senator: Ladner, 1489; Cooke, 7348; DeRenzo, 219.
State Treasurer: McKee, 1067;
Pratt, 1592; Malone, 6342.
Auditor General: Thompson, 1945;
Gelder, 6338; Boden, 597.
Delegates at Large to National Convention: James, 8314; Owlett, 8150;
Davis, 8237; Scranton, 8118.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

With the maturing of the twenty-second series, the Doylestown Building & Loan Association, at Doylestown, paid out $142,300, it was announced by Harry C. Garner, treasurer.

About $100,000 was paid out in cash, and the remaining sum, nearly $45,000, represents the cancellation of mortgages and stock loans.

Most of the 175 individuals who received the payments are County Seat residents or live in that section.

Treasurer Garner said that the largest payment was $6000, representing the maturing of 60 shares.

The sum of $100 was the smallest payment representing one share.

The series lasted 148 months, Treasurer Garner said.

The number of shares maturing was 1423, which representing $100 a share, makes the total amount of the present series of $142,300 which was placed in circulation.

Tax Collector Neal Nolan, of Morrisville, said that today would be the dead-line for the paying of school, borough and county taxes, and failure to pay at this time will result in the entering of property as a lien in the county treasurer's office in Doylestown and sold as of August 31, 1940.

No further taxes will be received after April 30th, Nolan states. In the past, local authorities have given the tax collector permission to withhold any taxes he deemed collectable. This year, however, no extension period has been granted and taxes must be paid before Wednesday or be recorded in Doylestown.

Several residents in the past let their taxes lag several months and took advantage of the extension. However, this year, all taxes will be sent to Doylestown to go on record there, and any persons not having paid before May 1st will be forced to pay the additional charge after that deadline.

Two upper Bucks County girls and one boy who are attending one-room rural schools, emerged winners in the annual Bucks County eighth grade spelling contests held in the Doylestown High School auditorium on Friday afternoon when 41 boys and girls competed in the hardest-fought battle of words held there in some time.

County Superintendent J. H. Hoffman, who served as the spelling teacher, presented the first prize of $3 to Gloria F. Long, 13, of Trumbauersville, who emerged as the eighth grade county spelling champion.

Miss Long, who has blonde hair, blue eyes and an engaging personality, survived more than 35 rounds of words. She finally met her Waterloo on consensus when she spelled it "concensus." Her teacher is Wilmer K. Meitzler, seventh and eighth grade teacher.

Bringing glory and achievement to the one-room rural schools which they represent, Jennie Snyder, 14, Quakertown, R. D. No. 3, who attends Tohickon School with Florence Fluck as the teacher, finished second place and received $2, while Stephen Hancharik, 13, Upper Bock Eddy, who attends Clay Ridge School, with Frances Stone as the teacher, finished in third place, receiving $1.

Politics And The War

Washington, April 29.

TWO ideas, cherished for some months in Administration circles, concerning the European conflict now appear to have been abandoned. One is that this is going to be a short war, the other that a negotiated peace, through the neutral powers, of which we are the chief, is possible.

NEITHER was a sound notion at any time, but they unquestionably occupied space in the President's mind until a short while ago. They were favorite theories at the time of Mr. Welles' trip abroad, but they have been discussed scarcely at all recently. Since the Scandinavian developments the hope of early peace has faded and conviction grows that the struggle will be prolonged, grim and increasingly violent.

IN such a situation it is clear that, this being an election year, the war unfortunately but inevitably will be linked with our domestic politics and, until November, at least, partially obscure the national issues and unhealthily affect the attitude of both parties and candidates. Already there is unplesing evidence of this. Apparently, convinced that the overwhelming sentiment in the country is to keep wholly out of the war, no matter what happens to the Allies, the Republican party obviously is veering toward the extreme isolationist stand.

SARANZAK AND HEISS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Charged With Hold-Ups, Robbery and Conspiracy; Also Violating Firearms Act

HEARING IN PHILA.

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Apr. 30.—Joseph Saranzak, 20, of Bristol, and Robert Heiss, 21, of Philadelphia, today were held without bail for the Grand Jury on charges of hold-up, robbery and conspiracy.

Arraigned before Magistrate Edward Conner in the Paul and Ruan streets police station at ten o'clock this morning, the two were also held at $1500 bail each, on charges of violating the state firearms act by carrying concealed dangerous weapons.

Both were arrested April 23rd for the hold-up of John Piechowski, of Philadelphia at James and Margaret streets, Frankford. Piechowski was robbed of his trousers, four dollars and the automobile of Stanley Maiska, which he was driving.

Saranzak was arrested by Pottsville State Police at St. Clair, where, police said, he and Heiss had fled. Heiss, who escaped, was picked up late the same day, at a Frankford rooming house by Philadelphia detectives.

Join Allied Forces

On the Namsos Front in Norway, Apr. 30.—Norway's tragic role as the battle front for all of Europe's war was invested today with disclosures that Polish and Czech legions have joined the ever expanding allied ranks of fighting men.

To participate in the major battle that is now developing in Central Norway, these troops are now moving down Norway's fronts to cross swords at last with soldiers of that power which made them troops and men without a country—Nazi Germany.

They were landed Saturday night at Namsos and according to the testimony of a British officer at allied war headquarters, they have swung into the front line of battle with the British, Norwegian, and French, who are ready now for the long-awaited test of strength.

There is every reason to believe that the Nazis, generally speaking, have advanced their last kilometer before a huge allied offensive by land, sea, and air is to be launched, to break the back, if possible, of the German invasion and organization.

The battle line north of Steinkjer has now been stabilized. It is a Franco-Norwegian line rather than a British one, for the sole reason that the English troops are not equipped with the skis essential for operation in the heavy snow. Lacking this equipment a British battalion was torn to pieces last week. It's members have now been withdrawn for fighting in other sections where the snow is not an element to be contended with.

The war around Lake Snaasa and Steinkjer is a ski war. In this mountainous terrain every experienced Norwegian soldier and every French alpine fighter is "another Finn"—a counterpart of the courageous fighters across the Baltic.

"HOT TIP" LEADS COUNTY OFFICIALS TO VISIT GEORGIA

County Detective, District Attorney, State Police Leave Hurriedly for South

INFORMATION REFUSED

Lie Detector Test is Given To Charles Rumpf, Son of Dead Man

What is believed must have been a "hot tip" received late yesterday, took Bucks County authorities south in their search for information relative to what happened to Christopher Rumpf, former owner of the farm where a skeleton was found beneath a basement floor by a plumber on Friday.

Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, District Attorney Edward Biester, and Private Fred Kohler, of Pennsylvania Motor Police, left hastily late yesterday afternoon after receiving a telephone call. They did not reveal where they were going and made no statement whatever to the newspapers. It was learned, however, that Detective Russo had been in communication with police in the South on Saturday, Sunday, and again yesterday.

Annie Rumpf, daughter of Christopher Rumpf, and sister of Charles Rumpf, is said to be living in Georgia. Charles Rumpf, who has been co-operating with the authorities in an effort to learn if the skeleton is that of his father, is still in Doylestown.

During the absence of Russo, Biester and Kohler, the lie detector test was given Charles Rumpf, who has insisted that he knows nothing of the skeleton and who says that the concrete floor was laid by him at least a year after his father, Christopher, supposedly left for Germany "in a huff."

Rumpf, yesterday afternoon, was taken into a private room by Lieut. John A. Funck, lie detector expert of the Pennsylvania Motor Police. The results of the test and the questions asked Rumpf remain a secret with the police. The test lasted about 15 minutes, and according to those who sat in an outer room, they overheard these questions:

"Did you murder your father?"
Rumpf is said to have answered "No."

"When did you lay the concrete in the cellar?"

To this Rumpf is said to have replied: "About a year after 'dad' left for Germany."

Rumpf consented to the use of the lie detector and is said to have been informed by the police that they had no desire to "trip" him in his statements or to "trap" him. "All that is wanted is the truth," the police told Rumpf.

It is believed that the authorities must have received definite word that Annie Rumpf is still living in the South. One report was to the effect that she had died in a Florida hurricane. The three police officials will visit Georgia and Miami and on their return go to New York to check other details in connection with the case.

LEISURE AND THE FARMER

It was woman, not man, who first raised plants for food and first turned wild beasts into domestic animals, according to Dr. Walter S. Landis, at a national farm chemurgic conference in Chicago. The transition from the hunting, meat-eating Old Stone Age savage into the farmer and herdsman of the New Stone Age occurred when plants laid on the turned earth of new graves took root and grew; when young animals brought back alive from the hunt were turned first into pets, then into useful herds and flocks.

Stay-at-home women did both these things, Dr. Landis asserts. He terms agriculture mankind's greatest accomplishment because it gives people a certainty of food with less labor than primitive hunting entailed, thus making leisure possible from which spring all the arts and cultures.

If Dr. Landis' theory that these important contributions to the world, agriculture and domestication of animals, were made by women is correct, it is possible that the women had a double motive. They probably did not relish the idea of having their husbands disappear for weeks and then return with a story that they had been delayed by unsatisfactory hunting and had to make a much longer journey than they originally had planned.

Women probably seized upon agriculture as one method of removing man's excuse for being a happy rover devoting his life to hunting and the search for alibis. And it is true that women, particularly, those living in modern cities, have benefited by the leisure that results from agriculture as contrasted with primitive hunting.

Dr. Landis complains that the farmers of today as a group have not benefited by the leisure that their toil makes possible. It apparently is his contention that the farmers of today are the rightful heirs to the contributions of agriculture and domestication of animals that he says women have made to the world. It could be argued as well that the women went through the trouble of making these contributions because they wanted the leisure for themselves.

The modern farmers, who follow in the tradition of primitive agriculture, although on a highly scientific scale, do not reveal a corresponding interest in leisure, judging by the way they toss agricultural products on the markets of the world. Dr. Landis may have a good point in asking that farmers should enjoy more leisure. If they were interested in leisure, perhaps production of farm products would lag and prices go up, even making parity payments unnecessary.

Under Germany's protective wing only a few days, Denmark has been ordered to restrict sales of food, bar private automobiles from the road after 7 o'clock at night and stop her streamlined, oil-burning trains. Not that Denmark is short of food and gasoline, but her benefactor is.

If they had to do it over again and could pick their own way of making a living, many persons would follow in the footsteps of a Kansas man whose card says he is a recreation specialist.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)
Teach us Thy way, O Lord—no industrial oppression, no hopeless little children, no cheerless old age, no grinding poverty, no racial hatreds, no false standards of judgments between man and man. Make us tireless in our activity to lift life to loftier levels, to hasten human progress and insure world welfare. Amen.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Soon everything was ready and the three of them were on the porch at the gayly bedecked table. Birds chirped sleepily in the semi-twilight; along the stream frogs croaked their dismal, monotonous tirade; everywhere locusts filled the air with a grating harangue of sounds; while two squirrels close by argued violently.

Tony and Dorothy kept up a banter of words which only mildly amused Gabrielle because of her own gnawing thoughts. She seemed filled with unhappy regrets. Why, oh why, she wondered, the pain deepening in her breast, couldn't she and Peter have managed to get along as Dot and Tony were?

"Eat, me hearty, or you'll be paler than you are!" cried Tony, smiling at her in such a way that she suddenly knew he realized she was not happy.

"I'm not pale, Tony—I'm just fagged out," she told him.

The days moved on and every time Gabrielle wanted to ask Dorothy about the meaning of her remark at the beach, she was forestalled by Tony's appearing, or the needs of Tony the third. It became a sort of mania with her...

They went swimming, fishing, canoeing; they ate, read, cooked. Gabrielle became a golden daisy with the deepening color of her skin. Her hair took on new life and shimmered dazzlingly in the September sunshine. Her eyes were somber, however, in spite of all her efforts to be gay. They revealed her heart and the other two could guess easily that she was actually unhappy.

In the kitchen she proved herself awkward and inexperienced in the art of even simple cooking. To set a table delightfully, to gather an attractive bouquet of wild flowers for its center, to prepare a tempting salad—if all the ingredients were placed before her ready for use—these things she did with an ease and grace.

"How did you learn to cook, Dot?" she asked one day in despair, after one of her efforts at cooking a one dish meal had turned out to be an abject-looking concoction.

"Why, I don't know—I just always have, Gaby," replied Dot, eyeing her seriously. "And—you never have, you know."

"But—" hesitated Gabrielle, a look of puzzlement coming over her charming face—"why did you when you have several servants in the house?" We have had only Violet.

"I think mainly because I've always liked to," said Dorothy levelly. "And, well, don't be puffed, Gaby, but my folks just haven't ever spoiled any of us. With four children in the family, even if there has been plenty of money, there's always been so much to be done."

Gabrielle stared at her intently, her face contracting like a puzzled child's.

"Do you think I'm so dreadfully spoiled, Dot?"

Dorothy laughed; "My word! Do I?"

"Oh," breathed Gabrielle. She slumped forward in the chair she was occupying, and added softly:

"I'm surely not much good to anyone—am I, Dottie?"

"Hold on! I wouldn't say it was that bad. Tony and I value you much, my sweet."

"I'm sure I don't see why," mused Gabrielle sadly. "I can see how it is now. Someway, these days in the woods have given me a good look at myself. Tell me truthfully, Dot, do you blame Peter for leaving me?"

"Oh—oh, dear! Let's talk about something pleasant, Gaby!"

"Dot—look at me!" exclaimed Gabrielle abruptly.

Dorothy obligingly turned black eyes on Gabrielle, but there was an obscure expression on her Indian tanned face which seemed to be trying to cover over her real thoughts.

"Tell me the truth, Dot, I can take it. I want to know if you think I deserved to be left by Peter? I want your honest opinion about our marriage. Tell me, Dot—it will do me good!"

Dorothy stared at her speculatively for a moment. Tony, Gabrielle knew, was out in the canoe somewhere, and Bonnie had taken the baby out for a sunning.

"Why did you say you never expected my marriage to last, Dot? Please tell me!" she persisted.

Black eyes gazed searchingly into golden hazel ones. Then Dorothy said in her low, unexpressive voice:

"Gaby—you know how I am about you. I wouldn't hurt your feelings for anything."

Gabrielle's eyes softened; she smiled a little one-sided grin, and murmured: "Of course, Dot. Go on."

"Well, the truth of the matter is you're so darned spoiled you never consider anyone except yourself, and have never learned to do anything worthwhile in your life!"

"Thank you," said Gabrielle steadily. "And—Peter? Do you think so highly of him that you think our crackup was all my fault?"

"Hardly that, Gaby!"

"Well, do you?" Gabrielle's voice was brittle; she spoke impatiently. "For heaven's sake, Dot! Just tell me what you think!"

"I think you're being melodramatic," murmured Dorothy, looking out of the window thoughtfully.

"Listen, Dot," Gabrielle spoke in a low voice, and it shook a little in spite of her desperate effort to control it. "I want to know what you meant so long ago when you said you never expected Peter and I would make a go of our marriage. I want to know what you really think. It's important, Dot!"

"But what good does it do now," wailed Dorothy, bringing her wistful gaze back into the room again. Yellow sunlight lay in squares over the floor. Birds sang cheerily outside.

"It's over and done with. What can you do about it now, Gaby? Let's forget it and go for a swim."

"No," snapped Gabrielle, suddenly setting her lovely mouth in a straight stubborn line. "Tell me now, Dot. Tell me exactly what you think of our messy marriage. Whose fault do you really think it was? Tell me!"

"There you go!" snapped Dorothy suddenly. "Telling me just what I should do. Don't you see, Gaby, it's just your way of doing things? You order everyone around, direct everything, and expect everybody to always do what you want—never do you even consider what they might like!"

"I don't, Dot!" It really wasn't a denial; it was a hurt protest. "I didn't order Peter around, Dot—I know I didn't."

"No," conceded Dorothy thoughtfully, "you didn't exactly order him around. You—oh, how can I make you see what you do! You simply go ahead on your way, gaily, expecting everyone to make you happy—and mostly everyone does try to! Like taking Peter to the night club right after we were married, Gaby!"

"What do you mean, Dot?"

"Well, we asked you to go with us and Peter said he didn't think you should. Then you surely remember how you said, 'Please, Peter, let's celebrate by going for a little while,' and Peter still thought you shouldn't go. He gave us an excuse that he had to be at work so early."

"Go on, Dot," urged Gabrielle, her face pale in spite of her tan.

"After a few minutes she lay across the bed, staring rapidly at the unfinished, beamed ceiling. She lay there for over two hours, but the greater part of this time she was not conscious of her surroundings. Around and around went her thoughts, some of them emerging as whole ideas, and these forming certain determined resolutions.

Visit 25 States in Tour
To The Pacific Coast

Mr. and Mrs. O. Olsen and daughter Ruth have returned from a six months' motor trip to California. They left their Newportville home on October 14th, taking the Southern route. They stopped in Arizona, and viewed the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

While in the West, they made their home in San Pedro, Cal., but enjoyed many tours, visiting Palm Springs, Long Beach, San Francisco, Hollywood, also taking a trip to Seattle, Wash., and to Tia Juana, Mexico, where they witnessed a bull fight.

A tour was made of Deep Springs College, in Deep Springs, Cal., comprising many buildings, nestled in a valley of 800 acres. At Easter time, they saw the sunrise service in Hollywood Bowl. A trip was also taken through the Redwood forests. While in Hollywood they witnessed several broadcasts with "movie" stars taking part.

Returning via a northern route, they made various stops. In all, they traversed 25 States.

GRAND THEATRE

Robert Bell, Hawaii's greatest entertainer, brought to the Grand Theatre and to theatre fans a delightful picture of swaying palms, rhythmic hula dancers and melodious Hawaiian songs and dances when he presented his 1940 edition of original Hawaiian follies.

The stage show will be presented for the last times today.

Wallace Beery, in "Man From Dakota," is on the screen.

Baby Joy, the Shirley Temple of Hawaii, came as close to stealing the show as anybody in the cast. She sang, danced and imitated Martha Raye, Mae West and Greta Garbo. Her Greta Garbo imitation, particularly, struck the crowd's fancy.

Neki la Maka, shapely Hawaiian hula dancer, does a hula to the rhythms of Waikiki's steel guitar band which isn't at all hard to watch. The band does all right with swing music and the "Beer Barrel Polka."

THREE RACING STARS TO MEET MAY 12TH AT LANGHORNE

Brilliant Benzine Battle of the Reading Inaugural Eastern A. A. A. To Be Continued

MARK LIGHT TO DRIVE

Bobby Sall, Another Veteran, Will Be Right at Home On The Fast Speedway

LANGHORNE, Apr. 30.—The eyes of auto racing fans are anxiously turned to Langhorne Speedway where, on Sunday, May 12th, the brilliant benzine battle of the Reading inaugural eastern AAA meet will be continued by three of the most brilliant stars of the afternoon on the Bucks County course.

Mark Light, winner at Reading, hung up a new honor there as he became the only living driver to win an opener twice, but the Lebanon Dutchman was hard pressed by America's most versatile driver, Tony Willman. It was Willman who stole the show with his sensational driving during the afternoon, for the Wisconsin wildcat refused to stay put in his starting position, consistently crawling up several notches before the race finished.

Tony started the feature from fifth place but tramped the throttle the whole way until he had Light plenty worried about the two-time win. Another Langhorne entrant, Ted Horn, veteran of dirt and Indianapolis classics, got off to a slow start at Reading, but he brought the 28,635 cheering fans to their feet for one whole event as he got hotter than the early summer sun that beat down, passing six cars in two half-mile laps.

And still another veteran will return to the Langhorne oval on May 12th in the person of Bobby Sall, who will be right at home on the East's fastest speedway, for it was here that the personable Paterson, N. J., veteran set the world's record time for circular mile dirt tracks two years ago.

Joie Chitwood, 1939 eastern AAA banner bearer, will also come back to Langhorne this year to try to make up for the car trouble that kept him out of wins here last season and at the Reading opener April 28th. Everett Saylor, midwestern champion and newcomer to the east, was also bothered by motor trouble at Reading but promises to prove his worth to the fans by stealing the Langhorne honors.

Headquarters for the Langhorne classic have been established in the Sylvania Hotel, Philadelphia, where, according to Promoter Ralph A. Hankinson, advance seat requests have been pouring in for the past several weeks in quantities surprising for so far in advance of the date, May 12th.

"FARMERS" TO OPEN 1940 WITH THE IRISH STARS

Manager "Dave" Landreth announces that the "Farmers" will open the baseball season Saturday afternoon at Landreth Ball Park at three o'clock. The attraction will be the Irish Stars from Philadelphia. This was the team that beat the "Farmers" on August 6th last by the score of 2-1, and proved to be a great favorite with the crowd.

Landreth's Seeds had a good workout on Saturday and Sunday. Howard Black, Al Carey and Lonnie Heiser took their regular turns on the mound; Jack Broderick was on hand behind the plate; Bill Griggs on first; Eddie Liberatore, second; Ray Costello and George Dougherty at short; Pompei Rossi on third; and in the outfield were Johnnie Milks, Vic Rockhill, John Breslin and Claude Lodge.

The above are all members of last year's club. Others taking part in the practice were Bill Gallagher, Eddie Sullivan and Punkie Zefferies. The weather was rather cool on Saturday, but Sunday proved to be a wonderful day and the boys looked great, and should be in tip-top condition for the opening game.

The Cadet Corps of the American Legion will parade to the grounds and give a drill before the game.

WANTS TO BOOK GAMES

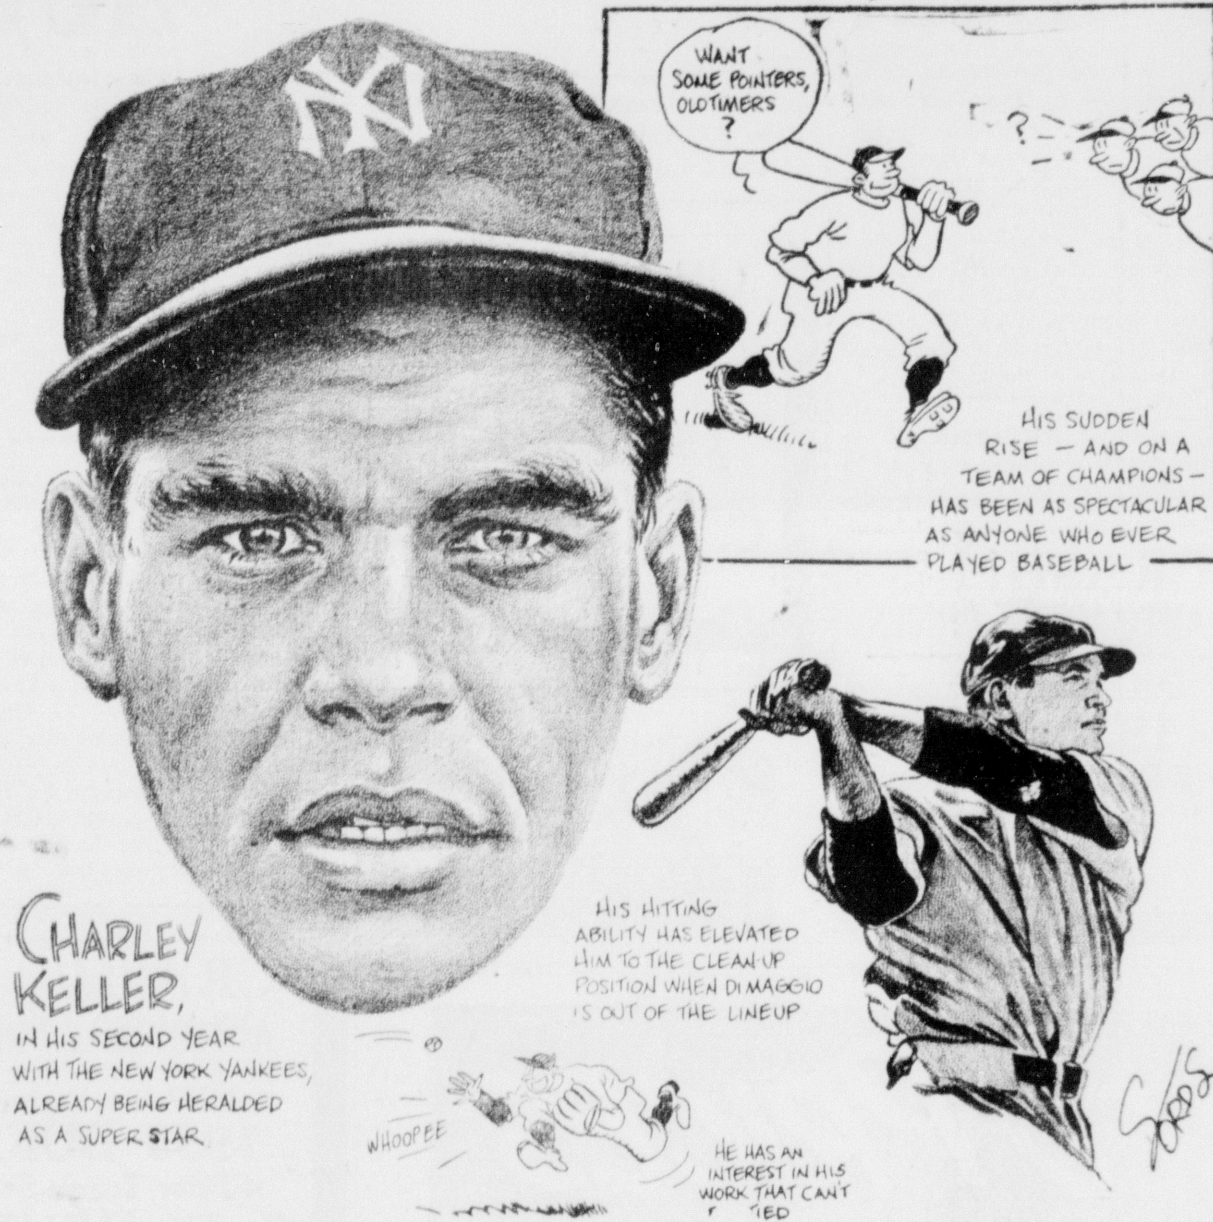

St. Francis School's midget baseball nine would like to book games at home on any Sunday with teams between the ages of 14 and 15. Teams interested may write to Michael Mullaney, St. Francis School, Eddington, Pa.

FALLSINGTON

Miss Edna Ruth Winder has been spending a week with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Satterthwaite, Newtown.

Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Stokes entertained at dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitley, Miss Gladys Whitley, of Emmelle; and Mrs. A. F. Winkel and Albert Winkel, Philadelphia.

FALLS NINE TOPS SOUTHAMPTON, 6 TO 5

FALLSINGTON, Apr. 30.—The Fallsington Falcons were forced to come from behind three times before finally nailing the Southampton Greyhounds, 6-5, in an upper division game of the Lower Bucks County League, here, yesterday afternoon.

Held to two hits for the first five innings by young Bill Schweinforth, Southampton southpaw, the Falcons hopped on the invading hurler in the sixth for three tallies, to go ahead, 4-2. But then the Greyhounds came back with a trio themselves in the seventh to assume a 5-4 edge, only to have the Falcons tie it up in the lower 7th with a tally on a single by Stan Felkner, a stolen base, an outfield fly, and an error. The winning marker was pushed over as the second out was being recorded in the last of the 8th, which was the first and only extra inning.

New York, they "denied that German planes had bombed a hospital ship near Aalesund, Norway."

LONDON, Apr. 30.—British war planes last night successfully attacked the German air force at Sornebu near Oslo, the British air ministry announced today.

Meanwhile the London Daily Telegraph in the dispatch from the Norway Swedish frontier said that the disembarkation of allied forces in Norway is continuing at an accelerated pace, some of these troops already have reached Gudebrands Valley, strengthening allied resistance against the Germans at Kvam. The British war office struck at apparently false reports of the Norwegian situation by announcing:

"Statements that the British command at Namsos has been superseded by the French are not true. The statement that our men are untrained and without reserve is nonsense."

The Admiralty announced Germany has lost at least forty transports and supply ships since April 8th in addition to many which might have been mined in the Skaggerak.

VANCOUVER, B. C. (INS)—Window displays in Vancouver stores remind the casual shopper almost daily that there is a war going on. Special displays in windows advertise gift suggestions for families and friends overseas — with emphasis on the war motif. One of the most popular gadgets among shoppers is a battery-less flashlight, labeled "for blackouts."

Pleading guilty to burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods, Kenneth Jones, 22, and Joseph Moriarty, both of whom are Norristown youths, were heard before President Judge Keller.

They are involved in the theft of chickens in Millford township on October 4th or 5th.

Private Fred Kohler, of the Doylestown sub-station of the Penna. Motor Police, who investigated, said about 100 chickens were stolen, representing a value of $150.

County Detective of Montgomery County James P. Gleason testified that Moriarty aided in apprehending some of the other defendants.

Harvey Carl, Millford township, near Gerville, testified 36 roosters, 73 pullets, 109 head, were stolen October 5th. "I was never repaid," said Carl.

The Great Game of Politics

to repeal the Neutrality Act, which would have barred us from selling materials to the Allies. But, in the main, the isolationists are more potent and the politicians frankly believe that the keep-out-of-it-under-all-circumstances policy is the best vote-getter. An indication of this has been given by Mr. Dewey, now leading in the nomination race. In Wisconsin he practically took the extreme isolationist stand, although the statement had been made previously that he was in harmony with the views of Mr. Stimson, and those who know him best are convinced he still is.

WHAT they think happened to Mr. Dewey is that, listening to some of his journalistic supporters and impressed with the keep-out-at-any-cost sentiment, he went farther in that direction than he realized. In any event, reaction to his speech in the East was not good among certain elements and the feeling increases that it would be disastrous if the Republican convention should be swept into nominating a man and adopting a platform pledged to a policy which, however it may accord with present sentiment, is really against the national interests.

FOR this reason, the movement to prevent any nomination on the first or second ballot has gained strength in the last few weeks. The argument is that if the Republicans are wise they will make of their convention a really deliberative body and not be stampeded into the nomination of any man or the adoption of any plank on foreign policy without fully considering the alternatives and measuring the consequences. All of which is a way of saying that Mr. Dewey's isolation tendency, while it may have gained him support in one section, has stiffened opposition in another. It has given some who were for him a point against him and the advice to the party of its elder statesmen now is "go slow."

THE real fear, of course, is that if the Republicans, as seems likely, go the limit in the isolation direction, pledging themselves against credits as well as participation, the Democrats will be forced to follow suit or be pushed into the position of a war party. To avoid this, there has already been a perceptible dilution of the original pro-Ally Administration policy. Today, the President's spokesmen are insisting that no one could be more neutral than he or more determined to keep us out of war. Yet, only three days ago one of the New Deal journalists who usually knows his stuff wrote this: "The essential fact is that the Roosevelt Administration seems disposed, if the need arise, to go farther than it already has gone in aiding the Allies—even to the length of becoming a belligerent in the air and on the water. If we go that far we might as well count ourselves all the way in."

TO this suggestion the Administration heatedly entered denial. From various quarters came insistence that so long as Mr. Roosevelt is "at the helm" there is no danger of our being "drawn in." The danger, insist the third terms, would come if someone should supplant him. The fact is that the keep-out-at-all-costs sentiment is forcing both parties away from a realistic attitude and toward a position in which the leaders do not believe. The political view is that if one convention makes a clear bid for the support of this sentiment, the other will be compelled to match the bid. In brief, campaign competition is making hypocrites and cowards of them all.

IN this situation, it is distressing not to have their leaders able or willing to tell the American people the truth and supply them with the leadership they need. Clearly, domestic politics is the reason the President is not doing either. Whether he wants to run himself or is merely intent on nominating a candidate of his own choice, the game he is playing robs him of candor in this vital matter. He is not saying what he has in his heart or in his mind. Like the others, he is trimming his policy to fit the particular political game he is playing. It is not a pleasant thing to contemplate.
